

EVENING HIGH SCHOOL

Tommy Wilkes is putting the finishing touches on a coffin that he made in night school woodshop, but not because of any premonition. This wooden kimona is to incase an electric clock and radio. It is fashioned after a "Grandfather's Clock" with the radio in the pendulum compartment. African mahogany, which finishes beautifully, was used. Mr. Wilkes figured it took about eighty hours to do the job. Lumber, clock, chimes, and radio is costing about twenty-five dollars. When finished it will be worth over two hundred dollars—savings of over one hundred seventy-five dollars. Why don't the other citizens of Torrance save some money by coming to night school?

Miss Chase, conducting the class in art appreciation, has on her schedule for March 2 an illustrated talk, "How beautiful were the ancient Greeks?" It is expected that this will prove exceedingly interesting, especially since the Olympic Games being held in Los Angeles this year is stimulating public interest in the life of the Greeks of olden times.

In the class on typewriting, Miss Vaubel now has five students who reside in Lomita. These students are each working for credits. The woodworking class is, to many men, the most interesting department on the evening school curriculum. A diversified variety of objects are manufactured here. A free and easy manner prevails which enables a man to follow out his program of work without interruption, or he has access to expert advice should he need it. Great credit is due many of the students for the array of beautiful and useful objects displayed here from time to time. Not only are new articles made there, but old furniture is repaired, windows, screens, doors, boats, etc., are made, and lumber can be worked up into fencing, spindles, and other materials needed around a home. The writer of this article spent about three years at an evening class on cabinet-making, and has a considerable array of articles produced in this class, including floor lamps, two desks, kitchen and library tables, stools, pictures, two dressers, a bookcase, windows, doors, and nut bowls. All of these articles were produced entirely without cost except for lumber.

We are organizing a class in French to meet from 7:00 to 8:00 on Monday night and 8:00 to 9:00 on Thursday night. It is open to anyone who wishes to learn something of the French language. The Advanced Spanish class will meet from 8:00 to 9:00 on Monday night and from 7:00 to 8:00 on Wednesday night. The Beginning Spanish will meet from 7:00 to 8:00 on Thursday night.

Mr. Wilson B. Woodburn, now a member of the Division of Markets, State Department of Agriculture, with headquarters in the Wholesale Terminal Building, Los Angeles, was a recent visitor at the Torrance Evening High school. Mr. Woodburn mentioned that his course in bookkeeping and accounting taken in his high school days at Torrance High stood him in great stead now as one of his duties was the inspection and auditing of accounts kept by the various markets under his supervision.

Doin's of th'

Flyin' Buzzard

By DUETTE HILL

The Flyin' Buzzard corral wuz about half full o' cattle, the brandin' iron wuz heatin' in the fire, 'n th' cowboys a practicin' up by ropin' each other. There's a snubbin' post in this corral, a post which takes the place of a man when y're short-handed, about five feet high.

Well, Buss pitched the lasso onto the person of Dogie Cy and managed to dally it around the snubbin' post, with Dogie bawlin', pitchin' 'n snortin', 'n jest as 'e found himself tied fast, a long lean cow come a chargin' outa the herd, a snarin' 'er comin'—he got wild, 'n learned how it feels when a cow comes to the end 'uv a rope right sudden as he ferget 'e wuz tied. He learned to play ring-around-rosie with that cow in no time.

She would bawl right at his heels 'n he'd squall, "shoot that cow, I tell ya shoot 'er." "We will, Dogie, if yu'll bring us a gun," says Slim. They finally met across the post from each other. The cow left when she saw his face, 'n somehow there wasn't a cowboy in sight jest then.

"Well," says Dogie, "I've allus heard that a cow's brains goes to horns 'n from the size 'n sharpness o' them horns, she used ta be all brains." 'N another thing, there'll not be nary Flyin' Buzzard cowhand a settin' down till I do." An' he loaded up his old .45.

Chain Stores Put New Truck In Operation

Latest Method of Transporting Dairy Products in Use on Pacific Coast

The first appearance on the Pacific Coast of the latest method of transportation of ice cream and dairy products was made this week with the arrival in this city of the very newest idea of proper refrigeration in transportation, a specially built 5-ton Moreland truck which is self-refrigerating.

This latest innovation in motor truck circles is owned and operated by the Lucerne Cream and Butter Company, and is to be used exclusively in serving their products to Safeway, Piggy Wiggly and MacMarr stores.

Equipped by Kelvinator, it automatically operates with power from the transmission while traveling on the highway and from a special electric motor while the engine is not running. This assures a temperature of desired uniformity, a vital factor encountered in maintaining the proper degree of coldness in the handling and preservation of all dairy products.

A temperature of 40 degrees below freezing is assured at all times in the compartments carrying ice cream, while 5 degrees above freezing is maintained in the receptacles for butter, cheese, etc. The walls of the truck are lined throughout with six inches of cork insulation to help maintain temperatures at a desired uniformity.

Carrying capacity of the new Lucerne truck is 600 gallons of ice cream and 8000 pounds of butter, while extra compartments are utilized for cheese and other dairy products.

A speed of over 45 miles an hour may be achieved by this mammoth truck, if so desired, and in a test run recently, over 200 miles were covered in a round trip from Los Angeles between the hours of six o'clock in the morning and five in the afternoon. This was achieved in the regular running schedule of the truck with the driver stopping at the stores in every city on his route and completely servicing the company's products.

ELEMENTARY School Notes

Miss Madilene Yeverka, primary-kindergarten supervisor of the Los Angeles city schools, visited the lower grades Thursday, February 11. Miss Yeverka was especially well pleased with the classroom work she observed.

The Union Ice Company of San Pedro, through its Torrance branch, sent a 100-lb. sack of potatoes, 1/2 sack of onions, and a large amount of beef, for stew, to be used for the cafeteria lunch at school. Principal William M. Bell appreciated this contribution, which was unsolicited. Mr. Bell was a pioneer in sponsoring the free lunch idea in the public schools over a year ago. With the assistance of the Parent Teachers Association, the plan has been carried out most successfully.

At the request of the Physical Corrective Department of the Los Angeles city schools, a Los Angeles manufacturing concern has agreed to change the children's time for hearing "Chandu, the Magician," from 8:15 p. m. to 5:45 p. m. Adults may still enjoy the program over KHJ at 8:15 p. m. In order to comply with the request of the Physical Corrective Department, which request was due to the fact that children were losing sleep, waiting for the later program, it was necessary to engage station KNX at 5:45 p. m. Persons interested in this program will be glad to hear that occasional health suggestions of value to children, have been introduced.

Many inspiring activities are now carried on in the various classrooms. The children in Mrs. Edna Russell's room are studying about the Eskimo people and the Northland. They are going to make an Eskimo village. The pupils of Mrs. Juliet Young's class are writing a book on Egypt. The book itself will be made, and illustrated by the class. When completed, it will be presented to the school library.

Boys and girls of Mrs. Mabel Petersen's class of last term received today, individual letters from a former classmate, Tami Sueda. Tami wrote to the pupils from her new home in Hiroshima, Japan.

The beautiful pageant, commemorating the bicentennial of George Washington, the program of which was published in the Herald last week, ended in a most delightful manner with the planting of a Virginia oak tree on the school grounds. The occasion was very impressive.

On Thursdays and Sundays, over KHJ at 5:45 o'clock, teachers are continuing to enjoy the splendid lectures by Angelo Patri, famous educator and writer. The lectures are especially for parents and teachers.
